NEWTOWN, Dec. 2.—After an hour's delay, due to a refusal to move the body from the house while a crowd of 150 milled about nearby, Frances M. Rempfer, 15-year-old Newtown High School sophomore, was laid to rest in Newtown Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Silently a crowd of bereaved relatives and friends, and the curious stood by the oak casket was lowered into the grave. The heart-broken mother, supported by the husband and father, stood close by the side of the grave near the cemetery-entrance, their two remaining children, Corrine and Charles, by their side.

Not a word was uttered as the coffin was lowered. When it finally rested securely, the Rev. W. A. Hawley, pastor of Newtown Baptist Church, gave the brief committal ritual, and then the Rev. Fred W. Gutbub, pastor of Newtown Methodist Church, pronounced the benediction. Frances' parents, her sister and brother, their hearts filled with sorrow, were led back to the waiting car, and the crowd soon dispersed.

The funeral service, starting at two o'clock, was brief and quite simple. It lasted but 20 minutes. The Rev. Gutbub was in charge of the ritualistic service, being assisted by the Rev. Hawley. A brief message of consolation to the few assembled relatives and friends by the Methodist clergyman, ended the service, and preparation for the journey to the cemetery just outside the borough limits, was made.

The waiting crowd, gathered at the corner a few doors from the Rempfer home, was requested by highway patrolmen to move to the next block. But each time they returned. Then came the unexpected announcement from the undertaker in charge, Stacy Brown, that the body would not be taken from the home until the crowd dispersed. "It's awful! Inhuman!" he told one of the officers. "I won't move the body until these people leave, even if I have to wait until tomorrow morning."

The ultimatum was given at 2.20. "Take the hearse home," was the command to the driver, and photographers started clicking their cameras at the "disappointed crowd." A fire siren shrieked, and apparatus clanged through a nearby street, but no one appeared interested in the blaze.

One hour passed, and the watchers became more numerous. Children enroute home from school halted to watch the proceedings. Those gathered discussed the murder from many angles, and the doors of the Rempfer home were eagerly watched. Some kept an eye on the rear entrance, thinking probably the casket containing the body of the unfortunate young woman would be taken out that way. Each time one of the front doors opened necks were craned. Some of the relatives left the premises, went down to the business section of the borough, and returned some time later.

Finally the undertaker came out, went to a nearby phone, and summoned the hearse and the funeral continued.

Six classmates of the dead girl carried the casket. The pall-bearers were: Margaret Whitlock, Margaret Dallan, Albert Taylor, Jack Hart, Thomas Zozorski, Howard Richards.

Two highway patrolmen cleared the streets for the ten automobiles bearing the relatives from the private service.

Many were waiting at the burial plot for the interment. The saddened mother bore up bravely as she was led to the last resting place of her eldest born.

At the conclusion of the service the curious swarmed about the open grave, looking down upon the plain wooden casket which bore a silver plate inscribed "Frances Marie Rempfer, 1917-1932."

The Rempfer girl disappeared from her home November 13th. Following the finding of her lifeless body in Double Woods, near here, last Saturday, Charles Arwine, a friend of the girl, who was being held at Doylestown jail on a statutory charge preferred by Mr. Rempfer, confessed he had murdered her. A bullet was fired through the young woman's left breast. Arwine is being held on a charge of murder.

DOUBLE ARWINE WATCH

Doylestown, Dec. 2.—Fearing possible suicide attempts, Bucks county authorities today redoubled their watch over Charles Arwine, 25, charged with the murder of Frances Rempfer, 15 year old Newtown High School student.

The air of indifference which he assumed Sunday when he finally broke down under the grilling of District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, Chief of County Detectives Anthony Russo, and state troopers, apparently had faded.

While District Attorney Eastburn prepared to proceed with the trial at the earliest possible moment, probably during the week of December 12th, an inquest into the death of the slain girl was to be held here this afternoon by Dr. John J. Sweeney.

Hundreds of friends and the morbidly curious jammed the streets of Newtown yesterday during the funeral services.

RIDICULE PROPOSAL

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 2.—A proposal of Secretary of the Interior Wilbur that physicians be paid by the government and treat patients free, was ridiculed today. Dr. F. FATHER OF 9 BURNED TO DEATH

Hammonton, N. J., Dec. 2.—Believing several of his nine children were trapped in a blazing farm house near here, Vincent Fachiano, 48, Philadelphia grocer, ran into the structure and was burned to death early today. Two firemen were injured while combating the blaze when a chimney toppled over, burying them beneath the bricks. With three of his children, Fachiano had come to the farm house, which he recently purchased, to prepare it for the arrival of his wife, Mary, and the other children from Philadelphia. Fachiano aroused his children, Elsie, 17; Anthony, 15, and Mary, 12, when he discovered the flames. Firemen believe Fachiano did not know his children had escaped from the burning structure and had gone back in to find them.

TIPSY BUDGET TO HARASS LEGISLATURE

State Assembly Cannot Long
Defer Making Both Ends Meet

MUST CONSIDER RELIEF

(This is the third of a series of stories dealing with the probable Pennsylvania legislative program.)

By Joseph A. Loftus

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Dec. 2.—(INS)—The spectre of a tipsy budget, defying the gamut of political and mental acrobatics aimed at balancing it, is destined to stalk legislative halls.

Pennsylvania's Assembly, convening next month, can not long defer this onerous task of making both ends meet. A budget made top-heavy by mounting costs of government will revenue fell off is certain to become one of the most troublesome items in the legislative program.

Unalterably linked with budget-balancing are taxes and economies, and the question of unemployment relief again must be considered. No provision for jobless aid will exist after March 1, when the emergency sales tax law expires, unless the Assembly before that date adopts measures to maintain the fund. This situation demands legislative consideration of the Commonwealth's financial structure immediately after convening, it is believed.

Political leaders on all sides find that huge governmental economies are imperative. Only the methods of effecting them and their exact scope are in doubt. Even if legislators were spared the task of finding more millions for relief, a balanced budget will still be a gigantic problem, fiscal officers find.

Only two courses exist, increased revenue through new taxes, or reduction in expenditures.

Organized sentiment—and it is solidly organized—is not only fighting new tax proposals in the State but demands drastic reductions in the present levies. Tax opposition has reached the stage of positive wrath.

Charles B. Winner is Chosen President at the Meeting Postmaster Clarence G. Young Urges Co-operation of Public

1200 PUPILS ENROLLED GIVES INSTRUCTIONS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 2.—A meeting of the Bensalem Township School Board was held last night at the high school here. Percy G. Underwood, president of the board, presided. All members of the board were present.

Various reports of committees were given with everything reported in good working order.

The board gave permission to the Boy Scouts to use the auditorium on the 15th of December for a first-aid demonstration to be held by the Boy Scouts.

It was reported the school buses were operating very satisfactorily. The school cafeteria was also reported to be very well patronized.

The Board adjourned and then immediately re-convened for the purpose of re-organization.

The following officers were elected: President, Charles B. Winner, Andalusia; vice-president, J. Harry Hartley, Trevese; the secretary and treasurer remaining the same.

It was stated some of the board members will attend the Directors' Day to be held at Doylestown, December 13th.

It was reported there are now 1200 pupils enrolled in the schools.

Our Gang Comedy Star To Appear Here in Person

Saturday matinee and night will be a red letter day at the Grand Theatre when Harry (Freckles) Staub will personally appear on the stage in songs, dances and jokes.

Harry (Freckles) as you know is the "Freckles" of the famous "Our Gang" comedies. He is on a tour of the country from the Hal Roach studios at Hollywood, and Bristol is considered fortunate in having such a famous little star, for just one day. He has made millions laugh with his funny antics in the "Our Gang" rascal crowd and is a very clever little dancer and singer.

With him on the bill will be Wandering and Glass in an act, "Opera vs. Jazz." This is not a high brow act, but one of exceptionally good singing. Hart and Sampson, sensational hoop rollers and jugglers, will also be on the bill. The screen presentation will be Victor MacLaglen and Edmond Lowe in "Guilty as Hell," a very fascinating and interesting story, with this very popular team of stars. A song revue ad news events will also be shown.

EMIL METZGER TALKS ABOUT WATER TO CLUB

Tells Exchangeites of The Percentage of Water in Human Body

EXPLAINS EVAPORATION

Emil Metzger, treasurer of the Bristol School Board, addressed the Bristol Exchange Club at its weekly meeting held in the Elks' Home last evening. The subject of his address was "Water," and for forty-five minutes he held the close attention of his audience.

He began his address by explaining the percentage of water in the human body, and in plants. He next explained the evaporation of water into vapor, the forming of the clouds, the condensation of the vapor, with rain as the ultimate result. He explained that the rain-drops were formed by the vapor forming itself around a particle of dust and if it were not for those dust particles, rain would fall in sheets, instead of drops.

Speaking of the part which water occupies in growing plants, he said the cactus plant absorbs the most water, and can live for a year without any fresh supply. The reason the cactus leaves are full of spines or needles, is to protect the plant from animals who would eat it for the great amount of water it contains.

Chemists, he said, tell us that water contains two parts of hydrogen and one part oxygen (H₂O), but when they mix, the two gases in this proportion, they cannot produce water. It contains other elements which man has not yet been able to discover. Hydrogen is a highly inflammable gas, while oxygen intensifies the heat, but the two together in the form of water, extinguish fire. Water is a great absorber of heat, and when it is thrown on a fire it puts it out, by the rapid absorption of heat.

Many more interesting things were told by the speaker, which were a revelation to his audience. It is regretted that such an interesting and instructive address could not have been listened to by a much larger audience.

APPEALS FOR SUPPORT FOR CHARITY GAME

Exchange Club Urges Public to Purchase Tickets at Once

MANY IN NEED OF AID

BY EXCHANGE CLUB PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

The Bristol Exchange Club, which organization is sponsoring the charity football game to be played on the high school athletic field on Saturday afternoon, December 10th, at 2 o'clock, makes this appeal to the citizens of Bristol to buy tickets.

There is a great need for local funds at this time. The State funds, which are being dispensed by the local committee, can be used only to purchase food. In consequence, there are no funds available to purchase coal or clothing for the unemployed. The teachers in our local schools are doing a commendable work, by maintaining a fund, to purchase shoes and clothing for needy children in the schools.

The object in holding this charity game, is to replenish the local treasury, with local funds, that can be used to purchase the necessities, which cannot be supplied from the State funds.

Bristol people who are able to help in this extremity have not been bothered with drives for a long time, and as far as known, a drive is not contemplated in the near future. This charity game in all probability will be the only opportunity to contribute to charity this winter.

The price of tickets for the game is only fifty cents, and inasmuch as the entire proceeds are to be used for charity, it is not so much a matter of buying a ticket to see the game, as it is to contribute fifty cents to charity.

If those who are employed and not in need of help, could only be made to see and to understand the distress and suffering that is prevalent in Bristol today, the purse strings would be opened and this appeal would be unnecessary.

Nearly two hundred families are receiving help from the State Relief Fund, without including those who are being helped by the Italian Relief Committee. Men with families dependent upon them, who are willing to work, but can't get it, are getting desperate. As an evidence that men are willing to work, yesterday, about a dozen who are receiving aid, willingly gave their services and unloaded a car of our, that was sent here by the State, to be used for charity. Men are gladly working for the Borough, that they might pay with labor for the charity which they receive.

Are the people of Bristol going to turn a deaf ear to an appeal for aid, and allow their neighbors who are gripped with misfortune, to suffer from cold and exposure, when a small contribution which they would not miss, would assist in relieving their necessities? The people of Bristol have never failed in an emergency, and they will not fail now.

Members of the Exchange Club will be on Mill street tonight selling the tickets. David Landreth is chairman of the committee, and anyone who is not reached by the committee should send their contributions to him, and tickets will be forwarded in return. The amount which the club would like to raise is $1,000. If everybody will help a little, it will be no trouble to put the drive over the top.

Mrs. A. M. Keyes, Philadelphia, has been spending this week in Bristol, as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whiteley, 329 Jefferson avenue, and of Miss Mary Haines, Radcliffe street.

SUITS TOTALING $75,100 DAMAGE CLAIMS, FILED

Trenton Family of Five Asks
$15,100 for Injuries

TWO OTHERS ASK $60,000

Phila. Couple Sues Newtown
Man for $60,000
Damages

Two suits involving damage claims totaling $75,100 have been filed in the Bucks County Court at Doylestown.

A mother and father, Louis C. Milacci, and his wife, Augusta, in behalf of their children, Mildred, June and Fred, filed a suit in the Court of Common Pleas claiming $10,100 as the result of an automobile accident. Charles Edward Firth, of Philadelphia, is the defendant named in the suit.

The plaintiffs, who are residents of Trenton, N. J., allege that on August 21, 1931, the defendant was driving a car on the Lincoln Highway between South Langhorne and Trenton and collided with the latter's car. Firth, the Philadelphia motorist, according to the statement of claim was operating his car on the left-hand side of the road.

The children, with separate claims amounting to $5,000, suffered injuries to their eyes, ears and lacerations of the head.

Mrs. Blanche Hollingsworth and her husband, Howard D. Hollingsworth, of Philadelphia, former residents of Bucks county filed a suit seeking $60,000 damages against Charles Lowmes, of Newtown.

The suit, filed in the Court of Common Pleas, is the result of the collision of a car driven by the defendant with one in which Mrs. Hollingsworth was riding.

Lowmes, the suit avers, was speeding at the time he ran into Mrs. Hollingsworth, who was crossing the highway in Pineville on November 7, when the accident took place.

Mrs. Hollingsworth, who, it is stated in the statement of claim, suffered "great anguish" and pain and permanent injuries, claims the sum of $50,000, while her husband seeks to recover an additional $10,000 for the "loss and companionship of his wife, her health and solace."

The action, which is the last suit filed in the December court docket, is one of the largest trespass suits filed here within the last year.

Bristol Firemen Save Horse and Live Stock

Three Bristol firemen, all members of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department, fought a stubborn blaze early yesterday morning at Ottsville when they discovered a large barn ablaze. The trio was enroute to gun for deer but delayed their hunting trip long enough to save livestock and much valuable property for Edward Mathias, who resides on a farm about a half mile south of Ottsville.

The Bristol men, Albert Stowe, a paid fireman here; Roland Betz, a former paid member of the Consolidated Department, and Joseph Stowe, left here at one o'clock yesterday morning to gun for deer in the vicinity of Sailor's Lake. As they neared Ottsville, about an hour later, they saw the reflection of a fire ahead of them. Driving to the scene they found the Mathias barn afire. A neighbor, Warren Weierbach, who lives across the highway from the Mathias place had just aroused the Mathias family when the three Bristol men appeared on the scene.

The Bristol firemen rescued one horse, 145 chickens, two hogs and saved four sets of harness and a lot of farm machinery. A bucket brigade was then formed and mounting the roof of the burning structure the men dumped bucket after bucket of water on the blaze until firemen from Dublin, Plumsteadville and Danboro arrived, a distance of nine miles away.

The Bristol trio joined with the firemen and continued their fight for over an hour and succeeded in saving nearby buildings. The barn was a total loss along with the season's crops.

Mr. Mathias was profuse in his thanks for the work of the Bristol men and requested that they leave their names and addresses with him. He complimented them upon their efforts and the manner in which they had fought the flames.

TRAMPS AND BEGGARS

An American authoress once ironically described tramps as "our leisured class." The world has never known such prosperity as that of the United States in recent years, yet no one can now have the experience of the man who traveled a thousand miles through the American Colonies without meeting a vagrant.

But the American tramp is seldom a professional like his idle brethren in England and on the Continent. Often he graduates from the exposure and hazards of the road to the ranks of honest toil. Hardly ever is he down and out.

America has never been troubled with beggars and vagabonds to the extent that Asia and Europe have been since the beginning of recorded times. Elizabethan laws grouped them as vagabonds, strolling players, soothsayers, wandering scholars, masterless men, gypsies, quacks, fencers and bear leaders. A sixteenth century historian listed twenty-five organized orders of knaves or mendicants in England with a membership of 10,000.

Asia, Europe and Northern Africa are overrun with begging fakirs who would not be tolerated in the United States. For Americans two flies in the ointment of foreign travels are the tip-grabbers and alms-seekers.

TOO MANY HOTELS

American tourists tour Continental Europe in preference to England because of the uncomfortable, unattractive English inns, whose landlords give little in the way of service and hospitality and extract much in the way of money and dissatisfaction. This surprises students of Dickens, whose writings glorified the English inns of his day.

No doubt the secret of the degeneration of the inns is to be found in the very fact that the stagecoach passed and the railroads came.

The coming of the railroad age also played havoc with the inns, taverns and small-town hotels of the United States. Once excellent, they became miserable hovels with nothing to recommend them but low rates. But the automobile age has changed all that here. Today the motorist can stop almost anywhere and get an excellent dinner and a clean, comfortable bed in a neat inn or attractive hotel. If the English inn-keepers have not risen to their new opportunities, it is sad enough. Nowhere surely should motoring offer greater charms than through the English countryside, rich in historical and literary associations and in natural beauty.

Here the lament is from the other side. There are numerous signs that the United States is overstocked with hostleries, especially costly hotels standing as non-dividend paying monuments to community pride and enterprise.

Insulting the intelligence of some people is more difficult than they think.

Another thing you can learn by correspondence is the inadvisability of signing mushy letters.

Offhand we'd say that the height of recklessness is telling the barber to use his own judgment.

FASHION DECREES WINTER "UNDIES" MUST MATCH SKIN

By ALICE LANCELIER
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(INS)—New winter undies must match the epidermis. This is the latest edict from French lingerie who have already made their pretty things matching moods, personality or the gown itself. But in lingerie, as in everything else, there is nothing as nice as a change, and they have decided that skin tints will be smartest this season.

The brunette will go in for the creamy-ecru shades, pale golden-yellows and cafe au lait tones. Annek is showing a pretty set in palest straw color, which would make any gentleman prefer a brunette.

But the blonde too, would have a big chance with all the charming fleshy pinks and delicate rose tones.

Off-white and oyster shades come for the Titian-tinted maiden, invariably the proud possessor of a lovely milk-white skin. She will also look stunning in the new ice-blue tones.

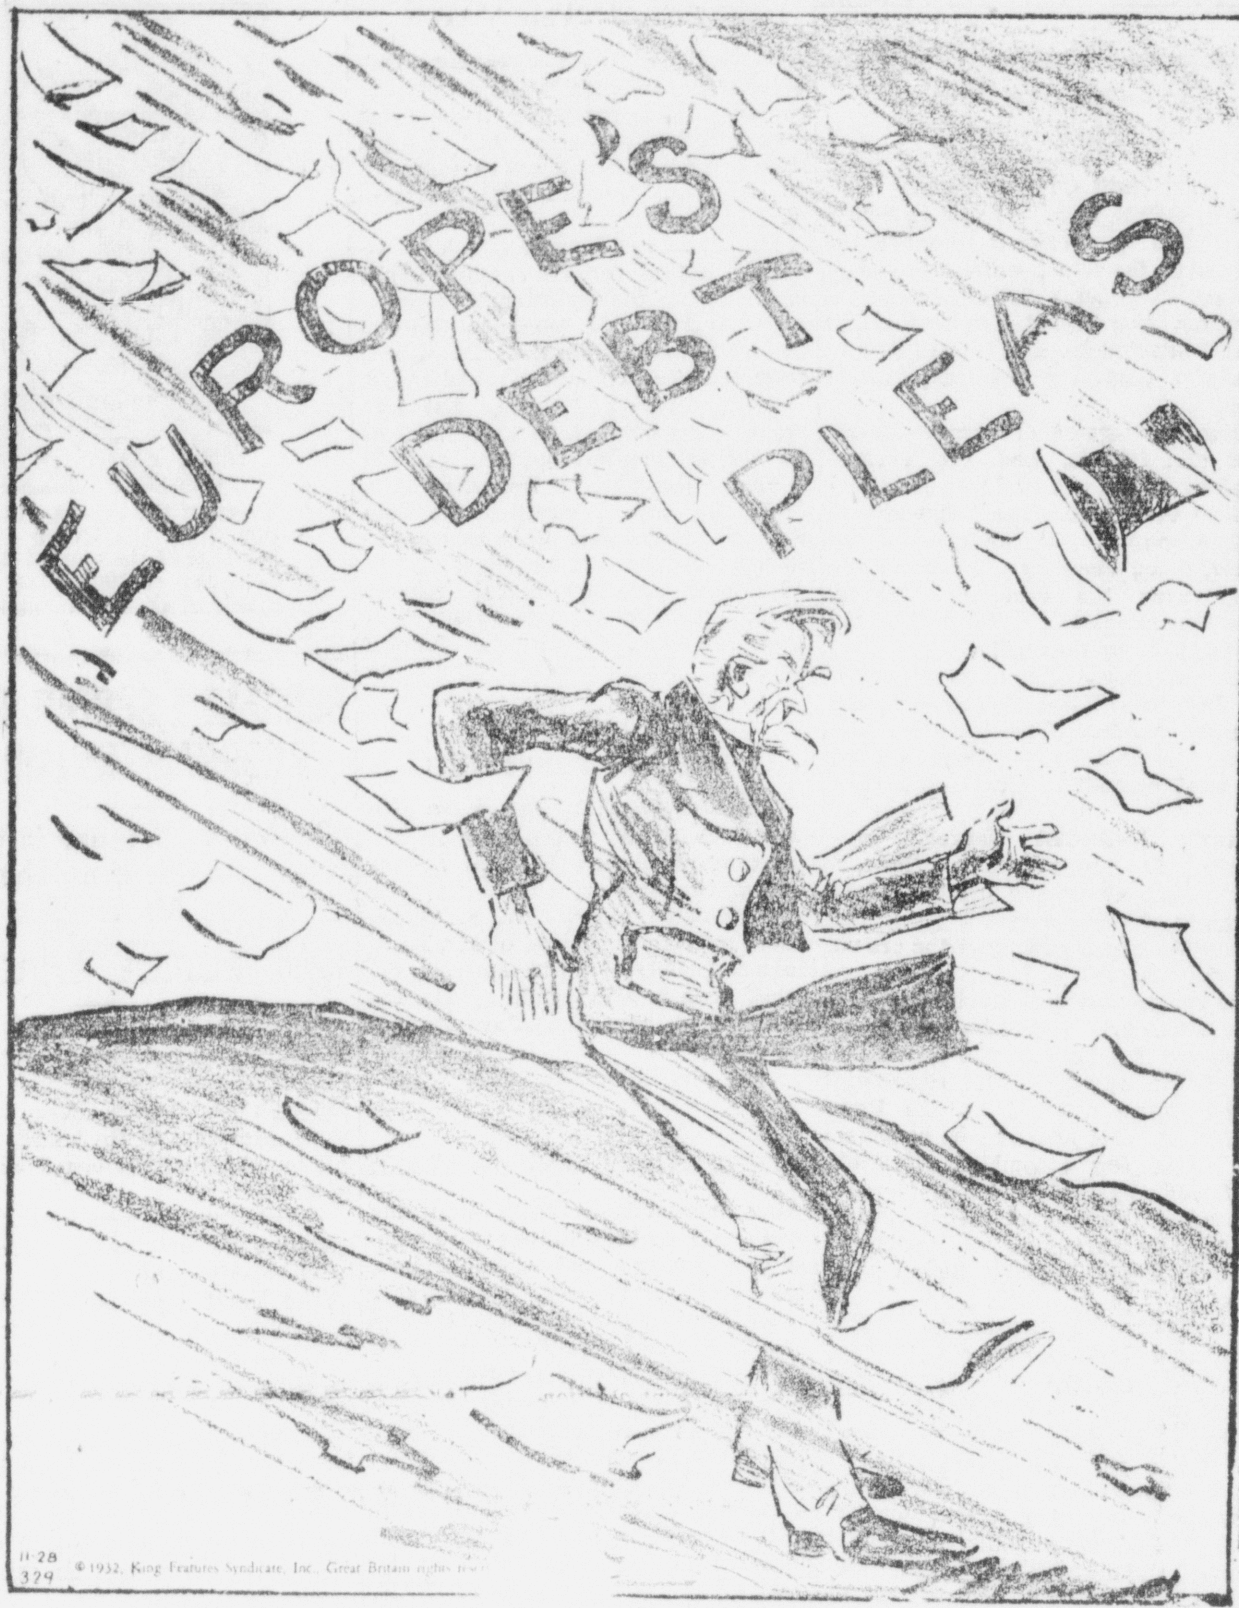

Triple voile, the fine crepes and crepe-satins are most popular for these new undies, generally trimmed with lace incrustations, although Vionnet and a few of the best designers prefer flatter trim and favor very fine hand-tucks or flower motifs in point turque. Cut on the bias, they are made to keep the silhouette as slim and slender as possible.

A Hurricane of Our Own!

SYNOPSIS

Young Dr. John Wolfe arrives at the quaint town of little Navestock to become Dr. Montague Threadgold's assistant. Though shabby of dress, the young doctor's bearing commands respect. Dr. Threadgold is very affable but his wife, who judges from outward appearances, considers Wolfe a "raw hawk of a man" and treats him coolly. Sir George Griggs arrives with a dislocated shoulder. He is infuriated over Dr. Threadgold's clumsy treatment and turns to young Wolfe who skillfully sets the shoulder. Later, Dr. Threadgold tells his wife that Wolfe has some ability but is a little forward. Dr. Threadgold attends the prosperous patients and assigns his assistant to the poor section of town. The young physician realizes the pitiable plight of these people in the hands of a bungling doctor. Wolfe reprimands a boy on horseback who mischievously annoys a group of children and spatters a girl with mud. The doctor asks Sam, Dr. Threadgold's bottle boy, who the youngster is.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"That was young Master Brandon, of 'Pardons,' sir, Mrs. Brandon's only son."

"Big people, are they?"

"Tip topers."

"Own much of the town?"

"About half, sir, so I've heard say."

"Mr. Brandon seems to do as he pleases."

"Lor, sir, who's to pony him? I've seen him ride his pony half into Mr. Hubbard's shop and swear like a lord at the old gentleman."

Wolfe looked amused.

"Do lords swear so very furiously, Sam?"

"Sure, I don't know, sir. I don't know as I ever seed one."

"And there is no Mr. Brandon?"

"Father—you mean, sir?"

"Yes."

"No, sir. He died a sort of idiot quite a long while ago."

They had made their way up a back street to Paradise Place, a row of brick and timber cottages, each with a small square of garden spread like a mat before it. How the place had earned its name it would be difficult to say, unless the person who had christened it had been blessed with a sardonic sense of humor. The bits of gardens were mere patches of dirt, and the casement windows, many of them stuffed with rags, looked out on the high brick wall of Miller Hansell's great wagon-shed. A pump stood in an enclosure half-way up the place. People called it the "Paradise Pump," though how many cesspools leaked into the well below no one troubled to consider.

Wolfe spent an hour in Paradise Place, and ended it with an inspection of the Paradise Pump. He decided that he would have a sample of that water, and examine it. An analysis might explain sundry phenomena that he had observed in the neighbouring cottages.

Walking homewards towards Mulberry Green he cast a critical eye over the fat boy and confessed to himself that the lad looked particularly healthy.

"You take plenty of physic, Sam?"

"Me, sir?"

"Yes."

"Ain't had a drop of physic since the measles five years ago."

"Whereabouts do you live?"

"Up Peachy Hill, sir."

"You're a rogue, Sam! Many people get ill, living near the peaches?"

"Not much illness our way, sir. It's mostly down along the river."

"And who's your landlord?"

"Mr. Crabbe."

"And who is Mr. Crabbe?"

"Why, Mr. Josiah Crabbe, sir."

Sam was out of breath, since

Wolfe had been striding at full speed up Market Hill. He gasped out information between heavings of the chest.

"Does Mr. Crabbe own much property?"

"All about Peachy Hill, sir."

"And the places we have been to this morning?"

"Part, Brandon, sir; part, Mr. Turrell, the brewer's, so far as I know."

"I expected as much. You are getting pumped, Sam, in more ways than one. What's that striking? One o'clock! I shall be late for dinner."

But Wolfe did not hurry himself. He appeared to be thinking hard all the rest of the way to Mulberry Green, and Sam, who was a lethargic lad, was content to wonder whether the cook at Prospect House had made a jam-roll for dinner.

When a man marries Sincerity he marries a strong-willed young woman whose strenuousness may drive him into many complicated situations.

John Wolfe was one of those detestably sincere people who cannot stand by and see a fellow man lie down to doze on a muck heap. It has been said that we create our own problems in life, and that the more sensitive we are the more we react to the imagined wrongs of others. Nor had John Wolfe been ten days in Navestock before he was faced with a problem that lay in the very path of his career. Most men who go out into the world of action meet this first crisis that rises like a bullying giant to try their strength. As a rule, all the advantages are on the giant's side. He has the big club, the furious arrogance of a great beast, and—above all—a friendly grin for those who prefer to surrender rather than fight. Life is much smoother for those who learn to adopt a habit of genial cynicism. Such men learn to shut one eye, to bend their heads, and to squeeze through narrow places.

Often after the day's work, Wolfe would sit on the edge of his bed and stare hard at the pink crimped paper in the Georgian grate. Someone had refixed the text in its proper position over his bed, and Wolfe had smiled when he had first noticed the readjustment. "My God, Thou seest me." And it is an echo of this cry that sounds in the hearts of the most unorthodox of men whose aim is to grasp life honestly, and to tolerate no excuses. We struggle towards something even in the teeth of our desires. We may not argue it out, or even reason the question. The choice is there. We take the rougher road, grumbling perhaps, calling ourselves fools, but taking it none the less. Always in the best man there is the sense of uplift against odds, that driving instinct that forces him forward towards something better. He is like a tired man digging a garden plot. Another weed! Why not bury it, leave it, pull it up in the spring? But the instinct of thoroughness is too strong for him. He stoops and pulls up the weed, swearing perhaps that it shall be the last.

Wolfe went about his work with a quiet thoroughness that soon began to accumulate facts. South London was not one of the cleanest corners of the earth, but the things that John Wolfe found in Navestock were more astonishing and far more scandalous. As for the people, they appeared surprised that he troubled to stay more than five minutes in each cottage, and the more servile among them tried to flatter him by contrasting his keenness with the hustling methods of his predecessors. Wolfe felt a peculiar interest in the men who had preceded him. He wondered how much they had troubled to discover; whether they had been true men or mere lick-spittles running a daily round. From what he heard, Wolfe judged that Dr. Threadgold's former assistants had been very easy-going young men, rushing through the day's work in order to play billiards at the "White Hart" or run after a petticoat. They had not dug under the surface of things to vex themselves with problems.

Wolfe bought some sheets of cartridge paper at Mr. Galpin's shop in Queen Street, and began to draw maps of Navestock, working at night by candlelight in his bedroom, with his portmanteau and the top of a box for a table. He kept a notebook, and jotted down his observations day by day, pushing his investigations into all manner of queer corners, hunting odours to their lairs, peering down surface wells, and scrutinizing ditches. He was unostentatious in his methods, and the people of the lanes and river alleys were too ignorant to trouble their heads about such eccentricities. They thought the new doctor a quiet, masterful, and rather rough young man. Malingerers grew afraid of him. The people who were really ill felt better when he had seen them.

On the mantelpiece in Dr. Threadgold's consulting-room, covered by a glass case, stood a very fine high-powered microscope. It was a "show piece," like the chef d'oeuvre displayed in the window of a craftsman's shop, suggesting what the expert could produce on great occasions. Dr. Threadgold had not touched the microscope for years, and though he possessed a fine collection of instruments he did not know how to use half of them. They were part of the general impressiveness of Prospect House, with the carpets, the plate, and the neat pair-horsed brougham.

Wolfe had had an eye on the microscope, and one day after lunch Threadgold found him cleaning the lenses and the mirror.

"You don't mind my using this, sir?"

Threadgold showed benignant condescension.

"By all means use it, Mr. Wolfe. What is it to be? A little botanising—a little physiology?"

"I have a few things I want to study. Pond water and protozoa."

"A most interesting recreation. I often wish that I had the leisure for such scientific relaxations. Cultivate your enthusiasms, sir, when you are young."

Dr. Threadgold might have shown less complaisance had he guessed the aim of Wolfe's investigations. He imagined that he had reduced this young man to a proper sense of his position, for Wolfe had seemed quiet and tactful and ready to accept any quantity of work. Wolfe's thoroughness made him cautious. He was not one who shouted upon impulse, but observed things and reobserved them before he uttered a word. He had said nothing to Threadgold of the many carelessnesses he had discovered, but had quietly altered the treatment without making any remark. Dr. Montague had in some measure forgotten the incident of Sir George Griggs and the dislocated shoulder. He had always had to deal with cheerfully compliant young men, men who had the instincts of boys and who had done just as little as was required of them, and then run off to play. Threadgold told his wife that Wolfe was giving every satisfaction, and since Wolfe did not smoke in the house, kept out of the drawing-room, and did not show such a gluttonous hunger as he had shown on the first night, Mrs. Threadgold was inclined to consider him a very passable person.

"Articles easily broken or crushed must be securely wrapped and crated and boxed. Use liberal quantities of excelsior, or like material, in, around, and between the articles and the outside container.

"Glassware, fragile toys, or crockery must be packed so as to prevent the escape of particles or pieces if broken in transit.

"Cigars: Ordinary boxes of cigars wrapped in paper only will not be accepted. Pack in a manner to prevent damage by shock or jar. Wrap in corrugated pasteboard or similar material. Cigars must be in good shipping condition.

"All articles easily broken or damaged must be plainly marked 'Fragile'.

"Parcels containing perishable articles shall be marked 'Perishable' and packed in suitable container, according to contents. Articles likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation and delivery will not be accepted for mailing. Use special-delivery stamps to expedite delivery.

"Addresses should be complete, with house number and name of street, post-office box or rural-route number, and typed or plainly written in ink. A return card should be placed in the upper left corner of every piece of mail. If a tag is used, the address and return card should also be written on the wrapper for use if tag is lost, and a copy of the address should be inclosed inside the parcel. Do not mail Christmas greeting cards in red, green or other dark colored envelopes, or in very small envelopes.

"Postage must be fully prepaid on all mail. Affix the required amount of postage in the upper right corner. Full information concerning postage rates can be obtained at the parcel-post or stamp window.

"No parcel may be more than 100 inches in length and girth combined nor exceed 70 pounds in weight.

"The use of a Special Delivery stamp will assure delivery on Christmas Day, and the day following if mailed at the proper time. Special Delivery service means the most expeditious handling and transportation of parcels practicable as well as the immediate delivery at office of address. It is obtained by affixing a Special Delivery stamp of the proper denomination, or its equivalent in ordinary stamps, in addition to the regular postage. When ordinary stamps are used, the words, 'Special Delivery' must be written or printed on the envelope or wrapper immediately below but never on the stamps. It is urged that all mailers desiring immediate delivery of any matter mailed by them affix Special Delivery stamps thereto. Special Delivery is for speed and not for safety.

"Uninsured parcels 8 ounces or less in weight may be mailed in street letter or package boxes at all classified stations and branches and at such numbered stations as are designated to receive parcels. Parcels weighing over 8 ounces can not be mailed in street boxes, but must taken to the main post office or classified station or branch. Parcels containing meat, food products, cut flowers, or other perishable matter should be mailed only at the main post office or one of the large classified stations.

"Written matter in the nature of personal correspondence can not be inclosed in parcels.

"Communications attached to parcels: A letter placed in an envelope, addressed to correspond with the address on the parcel and fully prepaid at the first-class rate, may be tied or otherwise securely attached to the outside of the parcel in such manner as to prevent separation therefrom and not obscure the address on the parcel."

WOULD FREE PRISONERS

DENVER.—Pardoning of all liquor law violators in the Colorado state penitentiary was recently advocated by Robert Tallman, general secretary of the Colorado prison association, as a means of relieving congestion in the prison. The state's liquor laws were repudiated in the recent election.

Tipsy Budget To Harass Legislature

ably opposed to new burdens in any form and is out staunchly for a substantial cut in the old ones. The organization is behind a movement to reduce the salaries of State employees to pre-war levels.

Merchants have organized and mapped plans to wage a vigorous battle against any proposal to renew the sales tax act. The State Chamber of Commerce for weeks has led a campaign for Commonwealth economies, demanding a 25 per cent cut in the budget. A tidal wave of sentiment for economy is destined to engulf the Capitol the moment finances get the platform.

While the unprecedented turnover in legislative membership has been attributed chiefly to the Roosevelt landslide, many legislators themselves are not so sure that the election results were not reflections of tax opposition and failure of the Assembly to cut deeper into expenditures at the last special session.

There is something to be said for both theories, however. Political leaders find an ironical note, for instance, in the fact that the two legislators who proposed cutting their own salaries in the 1932 extraordinary session were defeated in the November election. They were Rep. Bart Richards, Lawrence, and Rep. Fred W. Patterson, Beaver.

Select Judges to Officiate At Horse Show Tomorrow

Dr. William J. Lee, professor of surgery, and the students of the senior class of the School of Veterinary at the University of Pennsylvania, will be the judges for the events at the horse show to be held here tomorrow afternoon.

Additional entries have been made to the program which should make the afternoon prove interesting. A pony event, with 12 contestants will give an exhibition of riding led by little Carl Schilling, champion juvenile horseman.

Equestrians from the Kenton, Point of View Farm, at Yardley, and the Pennypack Riding Club of Philadelphia will have a number of horses entered. Samuel Stocks, Jr., the son of the riding master of the Boulevard Club will give an exhibition of jumping with his pony "Major" a metropolitan champion of his class.

Four new horses have been added to the club stables.

Mrs. George Hussey and John Schilling have purchased two Kentucky mares from the Point of View farms and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hanford have bought two stallions, one a jumper and the other a five-gated horse, bringing the total number of horses in the association up to twenty-two.

The events will start promptly at 2 o'clock at the Laing Farm on the New-entville Road. The Committee urges the crowd to get there early.

Change Student Government At Bensalem High School

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 2.—The student government of Bensalem High School has been changed. It is different in many respects from the old form of government and will be on trial to prove its efficiency this year.

The officers of the new organization are: President, Ella Smith, senior classman; vice-president, Ethel Hartman, junior; secretary, Anna States, senior; and treasurer, Charles Poekert, junior.

Tuesday, the junior girls played the senior girls in basketball. At the end of the game the score was tie and the captains agreed to play an extra two minutes. Final score, 15-13 in favor of juniors.

Boys' regular basketball practice started on Monday, November 28th. The boys were all anxious to get started.

Candidates for girls' basketball teams are being examined by school physician, Dr. MacKenzie. Only those who pass examination will be permitted to play.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

THANKSGIVING DAY IN PARIS

THANKSGIVING is the one day in the year when I want to be at my family board, carving a plump, golden-brown turkey. I want to feast my eyes on the colorful blending of turkey and cranberry sauce, and the delicate amber of candied sweet potatoes. To me there is no scene more cheerful than a Thanksgiving Day Dinner with all the family assembled and care thrust aside to make way for joy and gladness.

And a memory arises which makes me all the more happy to participate in the spirit of Thanksgiving. I recall a Thanksgiving Day I spent in Paris, many years ago. I was stopping in the American colony, on the left bank of the Seine. And with the approach of Thanksgiving Day I colony who felt as I did. Only one restaurant in Paris made an attempt at serving a turkey dinner, and that was Rosalie's. Rosalie was a kind old soul, with a real love of humanity, but the wrong idea about turkey. She hacked it into cubes, and served it in a manner unrecognizable and distasteful to those of us who are believers in the solid old American tradition of roast turkey and cranberry sauce.

Many of us were ready to break down and weep in sheer homesickness when somebody had an inspiration. "Let's have our own Thanksgiving banquet" this someone suggested, and never have I seen a plan go into action so quickly.

A large group of Americans who felt as I did were invited to the home of an American living in Paris. A few inspired women prepared Roast Turkey with all the "trimmings"—delicious dressing, cranberry sauce, candied sweet potatoes, pumpkin pie and coffee. It was a real Thanksgiving meal, and we all chattered and laughed and ate—it was great fun, but still, to me, something was lacking. I wanted to be with my own.

And everybody cleared the tables and sang and danced to American tunes played on the piano. I sat myself in a deserted corner of the ballroom and thought of Fall woods, and—home.

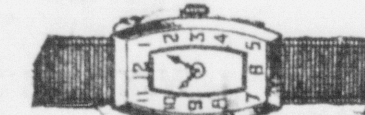

was lonesome, and blue, and deep in the depths of despondency. I craved America, and a real American turkey dinner, for in my mind Thanksgiving and turkey are synonymous.

There were many in the American

SKI-ING TROUSERS, SPATS INCLUDED IN WOMEN'S SPORT TOGS

By Alice Langelier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—Some chic ski-ing trousers are sporting spats this winter, if they aren't white gaiters fastened down the sides with rows of glistening buttons. Never before have ski-ing suits and ensembles been so gay and attractive, and everyone is looking forward to very elegant displays upon the ski-ing slopes all over Europe.

One of the latest creations is a pair of voluminous plus fours which fasten just below the knees and fall over to almost ankle-length. They come in water-proof broadcloth and the new peasant velvet.

Since bright colors are not best in bright snow, all the dull reds, rusts and browns will be prominent for snow wear. Navy-blue and black are always favorites.

Bright Chanel-red makes a popular all-round sports coat with brass buttons for trim.

A corduroy belt buttons on to the wide front panel and this panel is split at the top, crossed and buttoned under the edge of the round, boyish collar.

Bright red tweed also makes a smart sports suit with lines of red stitching which cover the seams of the gored skirt, edge the collar and pockets of the jacket and cover the tweed belt. What is very chic is the brown sweater-blouse to go with it, with wavy lines of grey and red and aring collar faced with the red.

Paton makes a smart sports ensemble of pale grey tricot, trims the coat with grey fox and buttons the dress down the centre-back.

Sports suits for winter are smartest with hip-length belted jackets and plain gored or pleated skirts. Pull-over sweater and tricot blouses are worn with them.

RESIGNS

At this week's meeting of the Junior Cadet Corps of the Joseph A. Schumacher Post, No. 1597, V. of F. W., Croydon, Commander Tanner tendered his resignation to the Corps. It having been necessitated by his numerous other duties in the Post, Commander Tanner appointed in his place, Comrade William H. Keene, Jr., who is also drill inspector.

MILADY DRESSES IN VELVET FROM HEAD TO TIP OF HER TOE

Gloves and Stockings Come in Velvet, as Well as Flow-ers for Trimming

By Alice Langelier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—Velvet is most decidedly walking away with all the fashion honors this season, appearing from the top of Madame's little head to the tip of her toes.

After velvet gloves for afternoon and evening wear have come stockings of the same fine fabric, cut with narrow pointed heel, matching or contrasting with the ensemble. They are the last word in cosiness on a cold night.

Smart women now walk with their hands in two hip-front pockets in which case the handbag is dispensed with and money and vanity-case carried in smaller-sized breast pockets. There are pockets on belts of the broader sort, on leather gauntlets for a tiny kerchief and on sports shirt-sleeves; these are of the patch variety. A scarf which matches a new ribbed wool tailleur is designed with one longer end falling to the waist and neatly pocketed for a colored handkerchief.

The mode of the square scarf appears in several of the newest creations and there is a novel evening gown trim obtained by draping a garland of velvet flowers from shoulder to waist across the bodice of the gown. Wool nubbles are effective, as when little black bunches are woven against king's blue or scarlet on a gray surface. Little white blocks of angora on deep, warm brown make an excellent sports dress, with a narrow knitted tie and belt done by hand in white angora wool matching a hand-made beret.

Square bright metal or wooden buttons are seen on new sports coats for town wear. Square buckles are in for belts and match the buttons. Long coats button on a crooked line with two large ornamental fastenings. Coat pockets button fast when the same buttons appear down the irregular line in front holding a single Directoire lapel.

Pegs attached to chains form frog fasteners for closing up the sides of chic suits. This is an autumn innovation of the clip variety. New wide ones are shown in plaid enamel offering a decorative note.

SOUP SALE

A vegetable soup sale will be held in the basement of the Harriman M. E. Church on Saturday morning from 10 to 12 noon. Proceeds to go to the Sunday School.

BRISTOL ACES LOSE FIRST GAME OF SEASON

(By T. M. Juno)

The Third Ward A. C. broke into the win column of the Bristol Basketball League last night downing the Knights of Columbus five, 33-24. Earlier in the evening the Y. M. A. handed the Bristol Aces their first defeat of the season, the score being 38-17. The games were played on the Italian Mutual Aid floor.

The Warders in their victory over the Aces took the edge from the start and were never headed, although the K. of C. five crept up to within two of the winners total twice. The down-towners would have had a much easier time if they had scored more often from the foul line. Only seven points were made by this method in twenty-three tries.

"Ed" Dugan was high scorer for the Pikers with eleven points. "Nev" McGinley played a fine defensive game which kept the losers' total from climbing. For the losers, Corrigan and McCafferty starred.

In swamping the Aces, the Y. M. A. remained in a tie with the Hibernians for first place position in the league. Both of these clubs have won two games and haven't been defeated.

There was nothing to the Y's victory last night. The Aces were much smaller opponents and the winners used their height to a good advantage. The two sharp-shooting forwards of the Y. M. A. were on the job last night and scored twenty-six points between them.

"Toby" Lawrence hit the net for six field goals and three fouls for a total of fifteen points while his other high scoring mate, "Reds" Bailey sent five field goals and a foul through the cords.

The defense of the Y. M. A. was so strong that the Aces only could score one field goal during the first half and three during the second half.

On Monday night, the Aces will meet the Third Ward club and the Young Men's Association will battle the Knights of Columbus five.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by WILL. Lindhorst

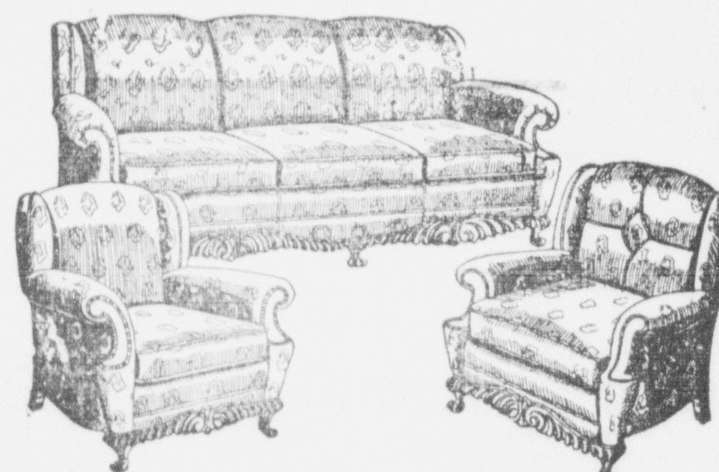

HOW TO HANG HAT ON WALL WITHOUT NAIL OR HOOK

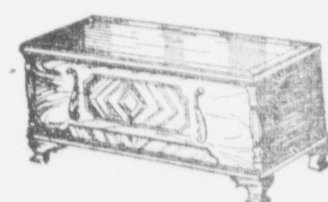

Take a wood pencil, octagonal shape, and rub it up and down against a painted wood surface, pressing hard at the same time. The heat caused by the friction will make the pencil stick and it will be possible to hang a lightweight hat on the pencil's point. As the pencil may leave marks on the paint, it is best to do this trick on an old surface.

Stars Who Lack "Color"

(By HARDIN BURNLEY)

GOOD — BUT THEY LACK "COLOR"!

WITHOUT "COLOR" FISTIC ABILITY IS OF LITTLE VALUE — WITNESS THE CASE OF MAXIE ROSENBLUM LIGHTHEAVY CHAMP, WHO HAS TO ACTUALLY CHALLENGE CONTENDERS THEY WON'T FIGHT MAXIE BECAUSE HE ISN'T A BOX OFFICE MAGNET!

SHADES OF JEFF SMITH, BENNY VALGER ETC.

DAVE SHADE — LIKE ROSEN-BLOOM DAVE IS THE BEST IN HIS CLASS, BUT BECAUSE HE ISN'T A DRAWING CARD, THE BOYS HAVE AN EXCUSE FOR DODGING HIM!

© 1932 King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Great Britain rights reserved

WHAT counts in the fight game just as in every other professional sport is not ability but "COLOR"—that magnetic quality that draws the spectators to the box office. And it's just because of this commercial aspect that good fighters who don't happen to be big drawing cards usually find themselves left out in the cold, while less capable mitten swingers who have caught the public fancy are gathering in the bucks.

A cagey veteran like Dave Shade can lick any middleweight in the land, yet promoter Jimmy Johnston of Madison Square Garden refused to include him in a trick elimination tourney, which was sanctioned by the N. Y. boxing commission in an effort to clarify the muddled 160-pound situation. The annoying Mr. Shade was also left out of the N. B. A. middleweight "eliminations," which were held some time ago, and which wound up with the shop-worn "Gorilla" Jones being declared "champion" after he had belted over three or four third-raters.

When you ask the promoters why they leave Shade out of so-called elimination tourneys, even though they know he would be favored to trounce any of the men they have selected, they will tell you that Dave is not a drawing card, and that it would kill interest in the division if he won the title.

The funny part of it is that they are probably right, and they could point out a case in which that very thing occurred. In the light-heavyweight division the champion is none other than Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom (in spite of the N. B. A.), and although Maxie is the best man in the division and a pretty good fighter, he has terrible trouble in getting fights. The promoters don't want to put him on because his mauling, slapping style fails to attract an appreciable number of customers to see him perform; and as a result the 175-pound division is as dead as a whole carload of door-nails.

There you have it! What price a fistic championship if the titleholder bores the customers? Just a few years ago when Paul Berlenbach and Jack Delaney were boxing the light-heavies they used to draw tremendous gates for championship battles, and interest in the division was red hot. Now, with the clowning Mr. Rosenbloom at the top of the heap, nobody knows that there is such a thing as the 175-pound division in the fight game.

"Rosie" could probably lick a lot of the heavyweights who are posing around as contenders for the title now in the possession of Boston's Big Business Man, but he'll never get a crack at any of them. He isn't a drawing card, and besides he's a VERY aggravating guy inside of those ropes. He aggravates his opponent by slapping him with a million gloves, and he aggravates the spectators by failing to do any damage.

So the chances are that the promoters are right when they say that Desperate David Shade would ruin the middleweight division if he won the title; just as Rosenbloom killed off interest in the light-heavies. Desperate David can't punch, and his crab-like weaving style fails to arouse any excitement among the customers. And, as he can lick anybody around in the middleweight ranks, they just naturally have to ostracize him.

But, no matter who eventually wins general recognition as 160-pound king, the smart fight followers will know that it's just one of those things, and that the real boss is the bent-jawed veteran with the puzzling crouch and the crafty old noodle.
